These are impressive figures. They show, what we cannot arrive at so clearly in any other way, the enormous proportions to which immigration has swelled. Clearly a business so great as this, and of such general benefit to the whole country, for the immigrants are distributed through all the States, ought to be controlled and regulated by the National Government. Every precaution should be taken to protect the interests of these valuable newcomers, to secure their proper treatment while on their way here, and their safe transportation

It is now said that the fate of both tariff bills will depend upon the decision of the Senate on Mr. Sherman's motion, because those who represent the steel industry maintain that the duties as they stand in the bill would be ruinous. On this ground some Senators and Representatives have announced that they will feel compelled to defeat the bill if they can, unless its provisions shall be changed. Defeat of legisla-

Prices of grain have advanced on account of actual or expected injury to crops here and abroad, but, as usual, speculation has been altogether beyond reason. At New-York over 34,000,000 bushels of wheat were sold last week, and over 10,000,000 on Thursday, which is said to be the largest quantity ever sold here in a day. Sales of corn amounted to 18 000,000 bushels; last year the sales for the corresponding week were about 6,000,000 bushels, and of wheat about 25,000,000 bushels. But the speculation in cotton has been very moderate, sales amounting to only 310,000 bales, whereas last year it was rampant, and the sales were over 1,100,000 bales. Prices closed about as they opened, the fear of injury from overflow of the Mississippi having caused a slight advance on Thursday. The exports were only 102,051 bales, but a year ago the record was only 69,918 bales, and the total shipments for the crop year thus far are nearly 900,000 bales in excess of those of last year to date. Speculation in lard has also been very active, with an through the efforts of her father they were prevented from marrying. The young man, losing all interest in life, came to America and became a recluse, and the maiden, became insane, and died in the madhouse. The will of the old man was that the fortune was to be dispersed after his death; and it was found that he gave the savings of a lifetime to his early love, whose mind is so impaired for her love to understand the significance of the gift.

The Virginia City Enterprise tells of a fight that recently occurred in that city between a cat and a hive of bees, in which the bees got decidedly the best of it. The cat's attention was attracted by the bees, and thinking they were some new kind of game, dabbed viciously at them as they passed in and out of the hive. At last one day the bees got angry and poured out of the hive in a great swarm, and the cat was obliged to retreat. The cat rolled herself into a ball, and tried to crush the bees with all her might, but with no effect, as the bees kept attacking as diligently as ever. After a time, she was taken away and was a week recovering from the effects of the attack. She cannot be persuaded to go near the hive any more.

The Burlington Free Press tells this story of the ways of a Vermont policeman: Mr. Rufus Brown is a small farmer of a neighboring village, who, a short time ago ordered a griddle to be made in a foundry in Burlington. Through some mistake they made him an

A CALIFORNIA VIEW OF THE SILVER DOLLAR.
From The San Francisco Bulletin (Oct. 10).

Nothing has so far excited the country than that the hundred millions of silver dollars, with this religious motto, should be recanted into good honest money by the fiat of Congress. It would seem that the currency in the country than was wanted; but there would not be a dollar more of good honest silver dollars if it were not for the action of Congress. The argument in favor of this adulterated coinage is that it would tend to keep silver in this country. That reason may be true, but it is not a sound one. Reasoning in that way, it never was a sound argument, and it is less so now. It certainly does tend to keep silver in the country, but it also tends to drive gold out of it. The owners of sub-treasures are asking for more room for storing away $24,000,000 annually of an 84-cent dollar. They say they will not want to hold any more than the bullion value of silver, and it is not wanted at all. If the government had no intention of buying bullion would probably appreciate in price. With the aid of silver certificates the country manages to get along without silver. There is no need of it except as a circulating medium. And yet, after the trial of specie redemption is past and there is no longer any demand for it, the government still insists upon its manufacture, and the pious motto is continued as if it were really an honest one stamped on an honest dollar.
